2ND QUARTER 2017

VOL 6 ISSUE 2

SWS would like to wish our valued customers and family a Happy Fourth of July. We hope you have a fun and safe holiday and look forward to the second half of 2017.

The above photo shows the distinctive framing for the pavilion.

The erection crew worked carefully installing the massive beams. The above photo gives you an idea of just how large the beams are.

The cantilevered glulam beams are supported at the center by steel frames.

FEATURED PROJECT Indianapolis Zoo Bicentennial Pavilion

Structural Wood Systems is excited about one of our recently completed projects (pictured above). The Bicentennial Pavilion at the Indianapolis Zoo opened the end of May this year. The indoor-outdoor environment of the pavilion will serve as the site for several zoo activities, summer concerts, and the new "Magnificent Macaws" bird show.

SWS and Sales Representative, Kyle Heminger, co-owner of Glue-Lam Erectors, Inc. worked quickly to ensure the pavilion could open on schedule. The crew of Glue-Lam Erectors, Inc., led by co-owner, Rory Wray, worked carefully installing the massive beams. The distinctive framing of the pavilion, which beautifully combines steel and wood, was purposely designed to give the feeling of being under a forest canopy. Water collected from the roof system is channeled into rain gardens under each of the towers to water the plants. We are proud to have been part of such a worthwhile project.
